- At KEC events such as race meetings and social or general club events,
- At all motoring events whether representing KEC or not,
- While travelling to or from those places; and

Online Social Media

Introduction

KEC recognises that many Competitors choose to participate in online communities of shared interest and create, share or consume content. We respect the rights of our competitors to use blogs and other social media tools (Facebook, Twitter, YouTube etc) not only as a form of self-expression, but also sometimes to conduct other activities. It is important that all competitors are aware of the implications of engaging in forms of social media and online conversations that reference KEC competitors.

KEC's expectations of member's personal behaviour in online social media

There is a big difference in speaking "on behalf of KEC" and speaking "about" KEC. The following principles refer to those personal or unofficial online activities where you might refer to KEC, be it during or outside of a race event.

1. Have fun, but be smart

Approach the online world in the same way as we do the physical one – by sound judgment and common sense, and critically by ensuring you adhere to KEC's policies around privacy, discrimination, harassment, and confidentiality. Remember never to disclose non-public information about KEC.

2. Act in alignment with our culture

Our guiding principles and vision and values give clear guidance as to what is acceptable and what is not.

The Foul Language Rule

All swear words (heavy & common) are prohibited - including words with letter substitutions such as asterisks, dashes or any other symbol. There will be no use of profanity. Posts containing any words of this nature will be deleted, and the offender will be reprimanded as asked to explain why their conduct was unbecoming.

The Personal Attack Rule

Abuse, insults and personal attacks directed at other people, particularly other site users, or Forum moderators, are unacceptable. There is no grey area in what is a personal attack - it is when a negative statement is directed towards another person. If you disagree with someone on a point, do not resort to name calling or personal attacks; rather argue the merits of their points. There will be no posts meant to offend or hurt any other member, in a manner which is offensive or inflammatory. There will be no racial, ethnic, gender based insults or any other personal discriminations.

3. You are responsible for your actions Anything you post that can potentially tarnish KEC competitors or the clubs reputation, will ultimately be your responsibility. This is obviously a difficult thing to specify, so "if in doubt, don't".

4. Be a “Scout” for compliments or criticism

You as a member are one of our most vital assets for monitoring the social media landscape. If you come across positive or negative remarks about KEC or competitors that you believe are important, consider sharing them by forwarding to the Executive Committee.

5. be conscious when mixing your business and personal lives

Online, your personal and business personas are to intersect. KEC respects your right to free speech, but you must remember that other competitors and families will often have access to what you post – whether you intended it or not. Even where it is inadvertent, there is potential for you to find yourself embroiled in conflict and / or innuendo that may be detrimental to your personal and / or club relationships with other competitors.

6. Know that the internet is permanent

Once information is posted online, it is essentially part of a permanent record, even if you “remove/delete” it later or attempt to make it anonymous. Modern technology means that there is always a risk that your posts can reappear to be traced at any time.

Breach of Policy

As is always the case, a failure to adhere to KEC policies may result in disciplinary action that may range from a warning to termination of your competitorship. It is very important that when referring to KEC or competitors in the social media space as covered by this policy, you do not directly or indirectly put yourself in a position where such failure to comply may be assumed.

This conduct as amended from time to time, binds all Competitors of KEC.

Where this Code of Conduct refers to laws, legal procedures or documents or rules or directions of persons or bodies other than KEC, it is the member’s duty and obligation to apprise him or herself of those laws, procedures, rules and directions as they may be in force from time to time.

All policies are available on the Internet or by contacting KEC committee competitors. Alcohol consumption by competitors is controlled by the relevant Queensland State laws in respect to intoxication before during or after events.
